Green with Envy

With everyone becoming earth conscience today it is no surprise that wedding companies are encouraging brides “to save the earth” while planning their special day.

Before the wedding. Adding Green elements to your wedding is not as difficult as you think. There are the obvious choices. Such as printing on recycled or even plantable paper. This is a paper that your guests can plant into a flower pot and it sprouts herbs or flowers within days!

Speaking of flowers! Ask your florist to use organic materials in the arrangements. Normal floral foam or oasis is not biodegradable.

Choose a vintage or family heirloom gown or a gown that was produced with hemp fabric.

Since we all have computers now. Do you really need to see your wedding proofs on paper?

Your photographer should be able to send you your proofs in a pdf. or images via email. You’ll save paper and your photographer may knock down the price a little more since they didn’t have to print proofs for you.

At the event. Instead of your guests driving separately to the event, hire a shuttle service to pick up and drop off your guests. You can also rent electric or environmentally friendly cars/SUV’s to chauffeur your guests in.

There are also choices you can make when introducing lighting to your reception. Use more candles to promote an ambient effect rather than lots of spotlights.

If you’re giving favors to your guests, choose something that is a reminder of how earth conscience you are. Give handmade soaps, lotions, candles, tea, or potted flowers. And don’t use plastic to wrap them in. Present the gifts in a paper or in glass jars.

Organic beauty products can be just as good or even better for you than ones with artificially produced chemicals.

Many companies like Aveda, Origins, and Jane Iredale produce high quality products that are made from natural ingredients and come in recyclable packaging.

Another great option is treating your bridesmaids to an organic spa experience. As mentioned in our previous newsletter. There are many spas that can come to you if you’d like the event to be even more special.

If you’re afraid this could bust your pocket book. You can always find great spa recipes online and host a spa day at home.
